Gun Bill Clears First Senate Test

Lawmakers vote to continue debate on proposed legislation

Washington

Watched by tearful relatives of Newtown school massacre victims, gun-control supporters in the Senate won the first showdown over how to respond to the December shootings in Connecticut, defeating an effort by conservatives to derail firearms restrictions before debate could even start.

Thursday's 68-31 roll call gave an early burst of momentum to efforts by President Barack Obama and lawmakers to push fresh gun curbs through Congress. The National Rifle Association, along with many Republicans and some moderate Democrats, say the proposals go too far, and the road to congressional approval of major restrictions remains rocky.

On Thursday, 50 Democrats, 16 Republicans and two independents opposed the conservative effort, while 29 Republicans and two Democrats supported it. Gun-control supporters needed 60 votes to block the conservatives.

Despite the vote to proceed, several Republicans said they would continue to oppose the legislation.

"The government should not punish or harass law-abiding citizens in the exercise of their Second Amendment rights," Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., said.

Expanded background checks are at the core of the Democratic gun-control drive. Other top proposals — including bans on assault weapons

Backstory

The Senate vote came a day after Sens. Joe Manchin, D-W.Va., and Patrick Toomey, R-Pa., two of the most conservative members of their parties, unveiled a less-restrictive compromise on federal background checks. and high-capacity ammunition magazines — will be offered as amendments but seem destined for defeat.

The vote opened the door to an emotion-laden debate on the legislation, which would subject more firearms buyers to federal background checks, strengthen laws against illicit gun trafficking and increase school safety aid.

Activists Behind McConnell Tape, Democrat Says

Washington

Members of the Democratic group Progress Kentucky were behind a leaked recording of a private conversation among Sen. Mitch McConnell and his campaign staff about potential rivals, a local Democrat alleges.

Jacob Conway, a member of the executive committee of the Louisville/Jefferson County Democratic Party, said the tape was not made by bugging the Republican senator's office but recorded after a February open house to unveil his reelection campaign headquarters in Louisville, Conway said.

He added that Shawn Reilly, Progress Kentucky's executive director, and Curtis Morrison, a former spokesman for the group, had boasted to him about making the tape. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Implant Helps Treat Acid Reflux

Magnetic device fixes underlying problem of chronic heartburn

Health

A tiny magnetic bracelet implanted at the base of the throat is greatly improving life for some people with chronic heartburn who need more help than medicine can give them.

It's a novel way to treat severe acid reflux, which plagues millions of Americans and can raise their risk for more serious health problems.

It happens when a weak muscle doesn't close after swallowing as it should. That lets stomach juices splash back into the throat. Drugs

Can I Get It?

The Linx device comes in multiple sizes; it is about a half-inch in diameter and expands to about 1.5 inches. People don't feel it once it is implanted. It costs $5,000, and the operation can run $12,000 to $20,000, doctors say. The device is available in 24 states so far. (AP) like Nexium and Prilosec reduce acid. But they don't fix the underlying problem, called GERD, or gastroesophageal reflux disease.

The Linx device, made by Torax Medical Inc. of St. Paul, Minn., is a ring of titanium beads with magnets inside. Doctors place it around the weak muscle at the base of the esophagus in a half-hour operation.

The ring reinforces the weak muscle to keep it closed, yet is flexible and expands to let food pass when someone swallows.

"It is a clever device," said Dr. Donald Castell, a gastroenterologist at the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston who has used the ring.

Storms Sock Midwest

System unleashes
twisters, heavy snow
across multiple states

St. Louis

Two deaths have been blamed on a strong spring storm system that's brought everything from tornadoes to ice and snow to much of the Midwest and parts of the southeast United States.

Mississippi Emergency Management Agency spokesman Greg Flynn said Thursday that one person died and several people were injured after a reported tornado struck Kemper County in the far eastern part of the state.

Tabatha Lott, a dispatcher in Noxubee County, said there were "numerous reports of injuries" in the town of Shuqualak. Flynn also said there were reports of damaged buildings and many power outages.

The T-shaped system first swept across the nation's midsection Wednesday night and pummeled portions of Missouri, where the National Weather Service said Thursday that an EF-2 tornado appears to have damaged dozens of homes in Hazelwood. That category of tornado generally packs winds of 113 to 157 mph.

Crews with the weather service still were assessing whether tornadoes were to blame for other damage in Missouri and neighboring Illinois, meteorologist Mark Fuchs said. Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon declared a state of emergency shortly after the storm swept through the eastern part of Missouri, bringing hail, up to 2½ inches of rain and strong winds. A suspected tornado also caused damage in Arkansas.

In the upper Midwest, thousands of homes and businesses lost power because of heavy wet snow, ice and wind in the past couple of days, while rain and snow raised flooding concerns in various areas of the Midwest.

The second death was reported in the Nebraska Pandhandle, where a woman died Tuesday while trying to trudge through a blinding snowstorm from her disabled car to her house a mile away.

3.4M Vehicles Recalled Over Air Bags

Detroit

Six automakers, including Toyota, Honda and Nissan, said Thursday that they are recalling nearly 3.4 million older-model vehicles worldwide because of defective air bags that can send shrapnel flying into the passenger compartment.

The recall mainly affects cars sold by Japanese automakers in North America, Europe and Japan. A small number of cars made by Germany's BMW AG and General Motors Co. are also involved.

The front passenger air bags all were made by the same parts supplier, Japan's Takata Corp. They have faulty inflator mechanisms that don't route gas into the air bags. Instead, the high-pressure gas can launch plastic and metal parts from the air bags into the cars' passenger areas. Takata says no one has been hurt, but there have been six incidents of the air bags deploying improperly on roadways.

All of the recalled cars announced so far were produced from 2000 to 2004. (AP)

N. Korea May Have Nuke Ability

Possibility of arming a missile a real threat, U.S. intelligence says

Pyongyang, N. Korea

Hinting at a missile launch, North Korea delivered a fresh round of war rhetoric Thursday with claims it has "powerful striking means" on standby. Seoul and Washington speculated that it is preparing to test-fire a missile designed to be capable of reaching the U.S. territory of Guam in the Pacific Ocean.

The latest rhetoric came as new U.S. intelligence was revealed showing North Korea is now believed to be capable of arming a ballistic missile with a nuclear warhead. The weapon is unlikely to be very reliable, the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency has concluded.

President Barack Obama warned the unpredictable communist regime that his administration would "take all necessary steps" to protect American citizens.

"Nobody wants to see a conflict on the Korean Peninsula," Obama said, speaking from the Oval Office alongside United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon.

Nuclear Revelation

In Washington on Thursday, Rep. Doug Lamborn, R-Colo., read aloud what he said was an unclassified paragraph from a secret Defense Intelligence Agency report that was supplied to some members of Congress. The reading seemed to take Gen. Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, by surprise; he said he hadn't seen the report. The defense agency's conclusion about North Korea's nuclear capabilities was confirmed by a senior congressional aide who spoke on condition of anonymity because the Pentagon had not officially released the contents. (AP)

In the capital of neighboring South Korea, the country's point person on relations with the North, Unification Minister Ryoo Kihl-jae, urged Pyongyang to engage in dialogue and reverse its decision to pull workers from a joint industrial park just north of their shared border, a move that has brought factories there to a standstill.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry is scheduled to head for Seoul today for talks with South Korean officials before going on to China.

Country's Neglect Wears on Voters

Valencia, Venezuela

It's just after nightfall and the power is out again in hundreds of thousands — probably millions — of Venezuelan homes. If the government knows how many, it's not saying. It hasn't issued reports on problems in the public power grid since 2010.

It's been like this for five years, pretty much everywhere but Caracas, the capital. Worsening power outages, crumbling infrastructure and other unfulfilled promises witnessed this week in a trip through the country's industrial heartland could be an important factor in Sunday's election to replace socialist President Hugo

Chavez, who died last month after a long battle with cancer.

His political heir, Nicolas Maduro, is favored to win, largely on the strength of Chavez's generous anti-poverty programs, which Chavez emphasized over public works.

But polls show that support may be eroding and the outages are a testament to the neglect many Venezuelans consider inexcusable in this major oil-producing state. Violent crime, double-digit inflation, official corruption and persistent food shortages are other factors. FRANK BAJAK (AP)

Assad Dominates by Air

Syrian airstrikes kill indiscriminately, U.S. rights group says

Beirut

President Bashar Assad has exploited his greatest advantage in the Syrian civil war — his air power — to push back rebel advances and prevent the opposition from setting up a rival government in its northern stronghold.

Along the way, fighter jets and helicopters have hit civilian targets such as hospitals, bakeries and residential buildings, according to a report released Thursday by a U.S.-based human rights group. It accused the regime of committing war crimes with indiscriminate airstrikes that have killed more than 4,000 civilians since summer.

The Human Rights Watch report said Assad's air force has dropped "imprecise and inher-

"The aim of the airstrikes appears to be to terrorize civilians from the air, particularly in the opposition-controlled areas where they would otherwise be fairly safe from any effects of fighting," said Ole Solvang of the New York-based Human Rights Watch.

In recent months, large parts of northern Syria near the border with Turkey have fallen to the rebels, including several neighborhoods of Aleppo, the country's largest city.

The Human Rights Watch report is the most comprehensive study of Syrian air force operations since last summer, when Assad's forces started to rely heavily on fighter jets to repel rebel advances and reverse their territorial gains.

Officials in Damascus could not immediately be reached for comment on the report. BARBARA SURK (AP)

The Tree Route

How people get to the cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin is almost as much of a spectacle as those famous clouds of pink petals. As I marched over Wednesday afternoon, I joined up with a parade of pedestrians, cyclists, scooter riders, Segway tourists and a particularly memorable Rollerblader with wobbly antennae attached to his helmet.

Most folks seemed to be looking for the perfect photo opportunity. I had a different destination: the Hains Point Shuttle.

The $1 ride, available through Monday (the day after the close of the National Cherry Blossom Festival), takes passengers on a loop around East Potomac Park. There are several stops along the route, but the main pickup point is the least picturesque. It's behind the Jefferson Memorial, beside a jumble of roads. (On the plus side, it's also by restrooms, a refreshment hut and bike parking.)

A shuttle pulled up just as I arrived, and three girls visiting from Philly disembarked. "It looks like a wedding aisle," one gushed as she urged me to hop on and enjoy the view.

In exchange for my buck, the driver handed me a pink ticket outlining the rules. This was for one trip only, nonrefundable. "Heavy pedestrian and vehicle traffic" served as the warning that it'd be slow going.

So there was time to meet my fellow passengers. What brought Charles Mascaro of Long Island on to the shuttle that afternoon? "Exhaustion," said Mascaro, who'd been walking around with his wife, Barbara, for eight hours.

The pink ticket explained the rules: This was for one trip only, non-refundable. And it'd take a while.

For me, the ride was the destination. But like most folks on the shuttle, the Mascaros were using it as a lift back to their car, which they'd left near the golf center. Parking spaces were definitely more plentiful around the tip of Hains Point than closer to the Tidal Basin, which is why 32-year-old Seema Patel ended up seated in front of me.

"We would have skipped this. I didn't know this park was here," marveled Patel, who was visiting from Pittsburgh, as we rolled underneath the canopy of blossoms, past people picnicking, lounging in the sun and minding their fishing poles.

With fewer than 20 passengers on an oversized bus, there was plenty of room to stretch out. We all leaned toward the open windows to get a better look and some breeze — it's shadier on board than in the direct sunlight, but there's no air conditioning. Other than a few kids shrieking in delight (or possibly fatigue), it was a quiet trip, a more relaxed way to soak in the sights.

It was a little jarring after a lazy 45 minutes to pull back up to the Jefferson Memorial, where a queue was waiting, holding strollers and red-white-and-blue Rocket Pops. But it was time to move on.

Destination: Blooms: There aren't special shuttles to see the D.C. area's other cherry blossom trees. But the regular buses work just fine. To get to Kenwood, Bethesda's blossom-bursting neighborhood, head to Friendship Heights and take either Metrobus T2 or Ride-On Bus 23 to the corner of River Road and Ridgefield Road. If you'd rather see the trees at the National Arboretum, get over to the Stadium-Armory Metro. From there, ride the B2 to Bladensburg Road and Rand Street. (EXPRESS)

Tree Transformation

AFTER A CHILLY MARCH, the District's cherry blossoms reached their peak Tuesday. National Mall and Memorial Parks spokeswoman Carol Johnson encouraged people to "come see them now because the weather could turn," noting that a hard rain or windstorm could cut the peak short. Otherwise, the blooms should remain in good viewing shape for one to two weeks. For more before and after pictures that feature the flowering of the famous trees, visit postlocal.com.

Lottery Company Draws Scrutiny for Contract

Washington

For more than seven years, the company that is paid millions to produce scratch-off lottery tickets in the nation's capital has managed to avoid a city law that would require it to include local businesses in the deal. And it hopes to continue to do so — with the blessing of the city's chief financial officer.

D.C. law requires that local businesses receive at least 35 percent of all contracts worth $250,000 or more in which part of the work is subcontracted. The law was approved in 2005, a few months after the District entered into a five-year, $50 million contract with New York-based Scientific Games Corp. as its scratch-off ticket vendor.

The contract was ultimately extended through March 20 of this year, and at no point did Scientific Games or the district's Office of the Chief Financial Officer make any effort to comply with the local participation rules, according to documents obtained by the Rev. Anthony J. Motley, a local activist.

"The council is not going to stand for anything less than what the law states."

— COUNCIL MEMBER VINCENT ORANGE, WHO CHAIRS THE SMALL BUSINESS COMMITTEE

After the initial contract expired, the CFO's office awarded a new, temporary contract to Scientific Games, the office said in a statement to the Associated Press. Just 17 percent of the new contract is going to local subcontractors, the office said, an arrangement that could face scrutiny from the D.C. Council when it comes up for approval again. Body Found In Tidal Basin

D.C. police have not yet publicly identified the body of a man found floating in the Tidal Basin early Thursday.

The body was found near the same spot where a tourist visiting from Chicago disappeared while visiting with his family on Easter Sunday.

It was the second body to be pulled from water near the National Mall in the past six days, both near the District's cherry blossom trees. On Saturday morning, a fisherman found the body of 63-year-old Robert Groshan of Northwest Washington in the Potomac River.

Police would not comment on the identity of the body found in the Tidal Basin and have not yet determined how he died. Relatives of the man who went missing March 31 — 36-year-old Sarath Kumar Potharaju — were headed to the District.

Out and Proud, And Taking a Risk

A gay Boy Scout pushes for change, but it may cost him

Bethesda

Surrounded by a dozen classmates, Pascal Tessier stood at a busy Bethesda intersection Thursday demonstrating against an organization he says he loves but knows doesn't fully accept him.

Tessier, 16, is a Boy Scout and openly gay, which puts him at risk of being denied the Eagle Scout ranking he has long pursued. "The best word would be devastated," Tessier said of how he'd feel if that were to happen.

In advance of the Boy Scouts of America annual meeting in May, where delegates from across the country will vote on whether to lift the long-standing ban on gay Scouts and leaders, those in favor and against the change have spoken out passionately.

Thursday's demonstration, which was organized by the B-CC Gay Straight Alliance Club at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School, where Tessier is a junior, took place at the corner of Wisconsin Avenue and East-West Highway, within walking distance of the high school. It was also, not by accident, a mile and a half from the headquarters of the National Capital Area Council, which is one of the largest governing bodies of the Boy Scouts.

Aaron Chusid spokesman for that organization, said Tessier has reason to worry about his status.

"Under the current policy, if he is out about being gay, he is not eligible for being a member, which would make it impossible for him to complete his eagle," he said.

Tessier said his decision to take part in the demonstration comes from realizing that many gay Scouts across the country are not as fortunate as him. "Even if I do get banned from the Boy Scouts, I still think it's worth it," Tessier said. "I'd rather put myself out there than not."

Strong Start for Sergio

Spaniard tied for lead with Leishman after 1st round of Masters

Golf

Sergio Garcia turned in a bogey-free round Thursday to claim a share of the Masters lead.

Garcia shot a 6-under 66, leaving him tied with Marc Leishman and matching the Spaniard's best score ever at Augusta National.

This is a course that has never suited Garcia's game — especially his shaky putter. But he breezed around without a bogey on his card for the first time since 2002.

It's still a reach to think this might be the place where Garcia wins his first major championship. He's had only two top-10 finishes in 14 Masters appearances.

But the way he played in the opening round could mean a change in fortune.

"Obviously, this is not my most favorite place," Garcia said. "But we try to enjoy it as much as we can every time we come here."

Dustin Johnson was alone in third, one stroke back at 67.

Tiger Woods was the overwhelming favorite coming into the tournament, and that didn't change after he opened with a 70.

"I felt like I putted well today," said Woods, whose only lower opening-round score at Augusta was a 68 in 2010. "We've got a long way to go. I've just got to go out there and play shot for shot. The golf course is Sergio Garcia shot a bogey-free first round at the Masters on Thursday. The Spaniard has never won a major in his career.

Good to Be Young

Tianlang Guan, the youngest player in Masters history, is only 14 years old, but he isn't afraid of Augusta National. In fact, after the first round he was two strokes ahead of defending Masters champion Bubba Watson. The teenager from China shot a 1-over 73 on Thursday after recording a birdie on his final hole. going to change dramatically. You've just got to make adjustments."

Woods has already won three times this year and reclaimed his No. 1 spot in the world rankings. But he hasn't captured a major since 2008, and it's been eight years since he claimed his fourth green jacket at Augusta. He is still four majors shy of tying Jack Nicklaus' record of 18 championships — a mark that becomes a little more daunting each time Woods, 37, fails to win one of golf's biggest events.

The talk at the Masters on Thursday went beyond the tees and greens to include the people outside the ropes looking in. Woods and Rory McIlroy, who shot an opening-round 72, had entouragees that included girlfriends with some pedigree of their own.

For Woods it was Lindsey Vonn, the Olympic ski champion and now his very public companion. She watched from the clubhouse lawn as Woods teed off on No. 1 and lingered around to see him after he came off the 18th green.

Caroline Wozniacki, once the No. 1 tennis player in the world, was in the crowd following McIlroy during the first round. (AP)

Failure to Communicate: Jack Nicklaus, left, has shared his secrets and strategy about Augusta National with anyone who wanted to learn from a six-time Masters champion, a list that includes Rory McIlroy, Luke Donald and Nicolas Colsaerts. But not Tiger Woods. "I never really had a conversation with Tiger that lasted more than a minute or two — ever," Nicklaus said Thursday morning after hitting the ceremonial tee shot. (AP)

Success of Nationals, Braves lends itself to an NL East rivalry

Baseball

One team has a history of winning that dates back to the early '90s. The other is a young, talented franchise fresh off a division title.

The Atlanta Braves have been a National League standard, reaching the playoffs 14 consecutive times from 1991 to 2005. The Washington Nationals have built one of the best pitching units in baseball, with a tough lineup of their own to pitch around.

The Braves and Nationals enter this weekend's series at Nationals Park with two of the best records in the NL. So is a rivalry brewing between Atlanta and Washington?

Local fans and players are both beginning to feel there's potential for one to emerge. D.C. resident and Braves fan Andy House, a 27-year-old transportation policy coordinator from Gainesville, Ga., has seen the excitement over this series grow since he moved to the mid-Atlantic.

"The Braves always have seen the Nationals as a thorn in their sides," House said. "Now that the Nationals are one of the preeminent teams, there's a feeling that we're going to be in a lot of battles with these guys. We were in battles with them when they weren't any good."

Nationals pitcher Ross Detwiler said he paid plenty of attention to what the Braves did a season ago. The Nationals won a major league-best 98 games, while Atlanta was close behind with 94.

"Both teams were watching each other in the standings," Detwiler said. "We were neck and neck the entire year. They won 94 games last year and didn't win the division title. That's going to hang over their head this year, and they're going to be shooting for it even harder."

Brandon Smith, a 24-year-old Georgia transplant and software engineer at DRS Technologies in Gaithersburg, Md., thinks a rivalry is unfolding based on recent interactions he's had with Nationals fans.

"I usually get a pretty hard time wearing my Braves gear around here," Smith said. "That said, I do find that Braves fans, and even myself, are disliking the Nats more and more every year."

Nationals center fielder Denard Span said that for teams to initiate a solid rivalry, they have to give fans a reason to tune in even when the clubs experience down years.

"The Yankees and Red Sox aren't as good as they were a few years ago, but every time they're on TV fans still want to see it," Span said. "And it seems players on each team, when they play each other, want to play their best game."

For fans like House, more is needed for the Braves and Nationals to become rivals. Both teams will need to continue battling for division titles, as well as compete in a hard-fought postseason series.

"There's a difference between a nemesis and a rival," House said. "And I feel like at this point it's still developing." JASON BUTT (FOR EXPRESS)

Wall Holds Up as Wizards' Leading Man

Point guard's play down the stretch has been impressive

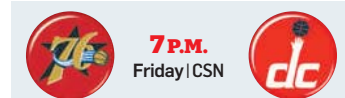

Wizards

As the Washington Wizards play their final home game of the season Friday against Philadelphia, fans will get one last in-person glimpse at the player who has firmly established himself as the bedrock of the franchise — John Wall.

JOHN McDONNELL/TWP

Wizards point guard John Wall has averaged a career-high 18.3 points this season and has four 30-point games since March 25.

It hasn't been easy for the point guard out of Kentucky since the Wizards drafted him No. 1 overall in 2010. He's had to work his way through terrible teams, a coaching change, injuries, high-level criticism, poor shot selection and his own foibles during his time as a pro.

But in the 46 games since coming back from a knee injury that forced him to miss the start of the year, Wall has proven himself to be one of the most invaluable players in the NBA.

"He's in a good state of mind right now," Wizards coach Randy Wittman said.

Since his returned to the lineup on Jan. 12, Wall has shown he's coming into his own.

He's averaging a career-high 18.3 points, with 7.6 assists and 4.0 rebounds while shooting a career-high 44.8 percent from the floor.

Since March 1, only Wall, Kobe

Bryant and LeBron James have averaged at least 23.0 points, 7.0 assists and 4.8 rebounds.

Wall appears rejuvenated and has given fans and the front office reason to believe he is the player that can help lead Washington back to the postseason.

"Whenever you are feeling good and playing good, you're more into the game," he said. "You're enthused, you're happy. That's the good thing about us winning — it all equals having fun with your teammates. They're all behind me and helping me out as much as possible."

Wall faced a great deal of scrutiny, both for his injury, which was announced suddenly on the verge of training camp, and for the mediocre start to his career.

Most notably, NBA agent David Falk teed off on Wall, saying, "He doesn't have a good enough feel for

Pitch Imperfect

Two years ago, John Wall uncorked one of the worst ceremonial first pitches in baseball history before a Nationals game. On Thursday, Wall got the opportunity to redeem himself, throwing out the first pitch at Nats Park. Wall spent the final portion of basketball practice working on his pitching motion to make sure he wouldn't deliver another stinker on the mound. "Last time I tried to throw a bullet like I was [Stephen] Strasburg or something, and it didn't really work," he said. (E.S.)

the game to be an elite player." Former NBA coach Stan Van Gundy also chipped in, saying, "I don't see [Wall] as a franchise player."

For the most part, Wall has answered his critics on the court.

"It feels good when you're playing the best basketball since you've been in the NBA," he said. "After all the stuff I've been through with injuries and missing so many games and having people say what they say about me, it means a lot to me." ELLIOT SMITH (FOR EXPRESS)

CALLING CARDS

Obama on the Line

President Barack Obama congratulated coach Rick Pitino and the Louisville men's basketball team on winning this year's NCAA championship. During a telephone call Wednesday, Obama told Pitino that Monday night's game was exciting to watch and that he's built an impressive team, the White House said. (AP)

United Looks for a Charge vs. the Red Bulls

D.C. United

It's hard to see the similarities now, but D.C. United's 2013 campaign is unfolding a lot like its 2012 season. If things continue to follow suit, United is in for a resurgent spring run, but it is clear that attacking adjustments need to be made.

Despite stumbling to a 1-3-1 start, with just two goals scored, United is not fretting.

Last season, United was shut out in three of its first five games as well, and it was a 4-1 home win over the rival New York Red Bulls last April that positioned United for success during the summer and beyond. The team improved on its 2-2-3 start with a 7-2-0 jaunt that began with that rout, and the club's hope is that the underachieving attack can sort itself out again when the Red Bulls come to RFK Stadium on Saturday.

The rivals have already played once this season, with United withstanding an offensive onslaught at Red Bull Arena to emerge with a 0-0 draw.

"We always seem to get the best New York team just like we did up there," said Chris Pontius, who scored five goals against the Red Bulls last season — including a hat trick in the April triumph. "I thought they took it to us pretty well. We need a bit of revenge. We need to be a little bit nastier than we were up there."

AL MESSERSCHMIDT/GETTY IMAGES

Forward Dwayne De Rosario is expected to return from injury Saturday.

United is likely to welcome back Dwayne De Rosario from an adductor strain that prevented him from playing in last Friday's 1-0 loss at Sporting Kansas City. De Rosario has missed three of the first five games through injury and suspension, and the 34-year-old veteran's inclusion comes at an ideal time.

"Every year that I've experienced winning a championship, the team has always started out slow," said De Rosario, a four-time MLS Cup winner. "We see it every year in this league. Teams that start out slow start to peak toward the end, the teams that peak toward the end usually go on to win it or go far. You saw it with us last year."

Where There's No Smoke

Apartment communities win points with residents by banning cigarettes

Trends

For Alyson Hanish, living in an apartment previously inhabited by a smoker would never work. “I’m allergic to smoke and really react strongly to it,” she says. “I don’t even like being in an overall environment that allows smoking.”

So when she was looking for an apartment in 2011, she knew she wanted to rent a unit in which no former tenants had smoked. Then she found something even better: an available apartment at North Bethesda Market, a complex that is entirely smoking-free (11351 Woodglen Drive, North Bethesda, Md., 866-926-6603, Northbethesdamarket.com).

In the D.C. area, people have grown used to smoking bans in workplaces, restaurants and bars. Now, a growing number of apartment complexes in the District and surrounding areas are making smoking a no-no — driven by resident demand.

No Smoking

“People want choices,” says Samuel Simone, managing director at Mill Creek Residential Trust (Mcrrtrust.com), a development company. That company’s Trilogy NoMA project (151 Q St. NE, 866-997-3792, Trilogynoma.com) will offer one building in its three-building development that is completely nonsmoking. (It’s expected to open in May.)

Hanish and her husband, Michael, a physical therapist, wanted the choice to inhabit an apartment that was good for their well-being. “We’re both in health professions,” says Hanish, 26, who works as a pediatric nurse and is currently studying for her doctorate in nursing. “Living healthily is important to us.”

Especially now that she’s pregnant with their first child. “It’s really nice knowing that the air is healthy to breathe,” she says.

Washington-area undergrads don’t have to be stuck in dorms these days. Learn about student rental trends in next week’s issue.

That kind of eco-friendly environment is something a lot of apartment complexes are touting these days. Indoor air quality plays into LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certifications from the U.S. Green Building Council, so forbidding smoking can be a way to rack up some LEED points.

It can also lure residents like the Hanishes who have allergies or who just don’t want to live anywhere near someone who’s lighting up. After all, cigarettes smell, and second-hand smoke can drift under doorways or through the vents.

The Millennium at Metropolitan Park (1330 S. Fair St., Arlington, 866-333-7158, Metmillennium.com), which opened in 2010, was the first property built by local real-estate developer Kettler (Kettler.com) to be totally smoking-free. Its 300 units leased in less than a year. Now the company has six more apartment projects in the works throughout the metro area, all of which will be completely nonsmoking.

Michael and Alyson Hanish, who both work in health-care fields, chose to live in a building where smoking is not allowed.

“People who do smoke choose to smoke outside quickly and then go back into their home, or they choose an apartment with a balcony.”

— PEI PEI CHAN, GENERAL MANAGER OF FLATS 130 AT CONSTITUTION SQUARE, WHO SAYS THAT EVEN PEOPLE WHO SMOKE SOMETIMES PREFER TO LIVE IN BUILDINGS THAT ARE SMOKING-FREE

“We feel like it gives us a competitive advantage,” says Nicole M. Jones, Kettler’s marketing director.

It’s not just new buildings that are saying no to smoking. After a 2005 fire — started by a cigarette — claimed two lives, the multibuilding Blairs community in Silver Spring (1401 Blair Mill Road, Silver Spring, 855-727-6640, Blairapartments.com) decided to outlaw smoking in all of its units — more than 1,400 total.

“We did a survey of the Blairs, which revealed that only 4 percent of the units had people in them who were smokers,” says Ed Murn, development director for the Tower Companies (Towercompanies.com), which owns the property. “So we made an actual policy change.”

Even smokers sometimes prefer to keep smoke out of their homes.

“We’re finding that people who do smoke choose to smoke outside quickly and then go back into their home, or they choose an apartment with a balcony,” says Pei Pei Chan, general manager of Flats 130 at Constitution Square (130 M St. NE, 866-300-2916, Flats130.com), whose phase-two building, cur-

Sign of the Times

Changes in attitudes about smoking make it easier for buildings to ban it. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the percentage of American adults who smoke decreased from 20.9 percent in 2005 to 19.3 percent in 2010. And according to the American Lung Association, the prevalence of smoking declined more than 50 percent between 1965 and 2009. “The younger generation has grown up with smoke-free bars and restaurants,” says Ed Murn of the Tower Companies. “They almost expect a building to be smoke-free.” B.L.

rently nearing completion, will be smoking-free. According to Chan, renters won’t pay any kind of premium for an apartment in the nonsmoking building.

Banning smoking is good for property managers, too. It helps complexes save on maintenance and upkeep. When an apartment has been occupied by a smoker, it requires more work to get it back on the market than readying an apartment where a nonsmoker resided. The carpet usually needs to be replaced; smoke can also damage the paint, walls and cabinets.

“It’s much more costly from the standpoint of materials,” Murn says. “Then it also takes you longer to turn over that unit.”

Of course, while many applaud antismoking policies, not everyone is a fan.

“There still is a perception that you have a right to do what you want within your four walls,” says Angela Bradbery, co-founder of Smoke-free DC (Smokefreedc.org), a citizen-based group that promotes smoke-free environments in the District. “But in apartments, you can’t do whatever you want. What you do affects the people around you. You can’t have band practice at three in the morning, and there’s a reason for that. So a nonsmoking policy just has to be explained in that light.”

Based on the phone calls she gets from people fed up with secondhand smoke intrusion in their apartments, Bradbery thinks there are plenty of renters out there who’d love the chance to live in a nonsmoking apartment building.

'Room 237' digs deep into hidden theories about 'The Shining' 20

FOX SEARCHLIGHT

Trance (R)

► Director: Danny Boyle

► Stars: James McAvoy, Vincent Cassel, Rosario Dawson

► Quick Take: Danny Boyle plays fast and loose with reality in his lurid, propulsive, twisty and trippy thriller about an amnesiac man (McAvoy) who gets hypnotized in order to remember where he has hidden a stolen, multimillion-dollar painting. You're never quite sure whether what you're seeing is actually happening or merely the result of a character's post-hypnotic suggestion. Like "Inception," it's premised on the mind's ability to fool itself. That's one of the film's pleasures. There are, however, some problems: particularly how the big reveals never make perfect, satisfying sense. But maybe that's the point. ANN HORNADAY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The movie is film noir, sorta.

"Trance" employs many of the genre's tropes: a hero (or antihero — he did steal a pretty expensive painting) who's not quite sure where he stands in the world, a crime-ridden city and a femme fatale. Granted, in most noirs the femme fatale takes off only her glasses; Dawson's reveal is much more, let's say, extensive.

"People like genre," Boyle says. "They like to know where they are. But what you do then is try to mess with it." KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Minding The Gaps

Director Danny Boyle plays brain games in his movie 'Trance'

Film

There goes Danny Boyle again, venturing deep into the mind of another main character. It's what the director did with "Trainspotting," "127 Hours" and "Slumdog Millionaire," showing audiences the brain's ability to triumph over drugs, boulders, poverty and game shows.

With his latest, "Trance," opening Friday, Boyle questions everything you thought you knew about thought. Before you see this Hitchcock story for the iPad age, there are a few things Boyle would like you to remember:

Memory is random. In the film, James McAvoy plays Simon, an art auctioneer who steals a painting, only to forget where he put it. That doesn't make gang-leader Franck (Vincent Cassel) happy, so he hires a hypnotherapist (Rosario Dawson) to plunder the depths of Simon's mind and find the missing art.

As Simon moves in and out of trances, his memory starts to become very unreliable, leading to questions that strike at the core of his identity.

"I think memory is everything," Boyle says. "To be who you are, you have to remember who you are. [In the film,] someone goes in there and interferes with that chain, or inserts something else, and that's McAvoy's journey."

The name of the bar isn't random. The club featured heavily in the film is called Analog, a name Boyle chose for its relative quaintness in the digital age. "There's something trustworthy about it," Boyle says. "There's something dependable."

Goodbye, Silverdocs; Hello, AFI Docs

AFI's Silver Spring-set documentary festival is getting a makeover

Film

Silverdocs, the AFI-Discovery Channel documentary film festival that for the past 10 years has made Silver Spring a destination for nonfiction filmmakers and their fans, is losing a sponsor, gaining another one, changing its name and expanding its reach.

Running June 19-23 this year, the festival, now known as AFI Docs presented by Audi, will have a more significant presence in Washington, director Sky Sitney says. In addition to presenting its opening-night, closing-night and gala screenings at the Newseum, more screenings will be held in other D.C. venues, including the National Portrait Gallery and the National Museum of American History. A newly retooled conference — the Catalyst Sessions — will involve tightly focused panels on issues associated with the films on view, and will transpire at the Newseum.

AFI's Silver Theatre will still screen all the films in the newly named AFI Docs.

The changes come on the heels of Silverdocs' rapid rise as a major stop on the film festival circuit, as well as shifts in Discovery's corporate focus that resulted in a decline in the channel's support.

Sitney notes that Silver Spring is not being left behind — the festival's full program will still be screened at the Silver Theatre.

"There's something symbolically potent about having a robust festival, especially a documentary festival, truly in the heart of D.C.," Sitney says.

As if the on-set taunting didn't make his job tough enough, Boseman — a 36-year-old relative newcomer to film who's starring alongside Harrison Ford — had the responsibility of portraying a legend.

"We would have baseball practice, and we would tape [it]," he says. "And they would split-screen me doing certain things and [Robinson] doing it." While Boseman eventually picked up Robinson's batting stance, throwing style and even his pigeon toes, he says imitating the legend's on-field talents took a backseat, as writer-director Brian Helgeland's script focused more on Robinson's emotional struggles.

In the film's most discomfiting scene, Phillies manager Ben Chapman (Alan Tudyk) lets loose a horrifically bigoted series of barbs while Robinson's at the plate. "It's a twisted thing sometimes," Boseman says. "Once you've heard [the taunting] a certain number of times, you can get lost in it. And then you do feel how awful it is. The actor in you wants them to [jeer], and that human spirit in you wants to hear approval — it does get to you."

Boseman's strategy of using the scripted hate to improve his performance was informed by Robinson's competitive spirit, he says.

"I think he just sort of let [the boos] drive him," Boseman says. "But at a certain point, people were coming to the ballparks to see him play, so he felt all of it, I think. The cheers and the boos. And I felt it, too." KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Film

Chadwick Boseman delivers a crowd-pleasing performance in "42." Which was a problem. The crowd was supposed to boo.

While filming the biopic, in which the Howard University alum portrays baseball legend Jackie Robinson, Boseman drew cheers from the extras in the stands who were hired to pretend to be jeering the first African-American player in the majors. The extras' reaction was partly a response to Boseman's skills on the field, and partly a rejection of the disturbing behavior that the script — and history — required of them.

"I remember we did seven or eight takes," Boseman says, "and I'm running down the first base line, sprinting, and not only do I have to sprint full speed, but the guy on third has to backhand [the ball] and jump and throw to first, bounce it, and the first base guy catches it, and I have to beat the throw. Now all that's got to happen, but the crowd is cheering for me — when they should be booing."

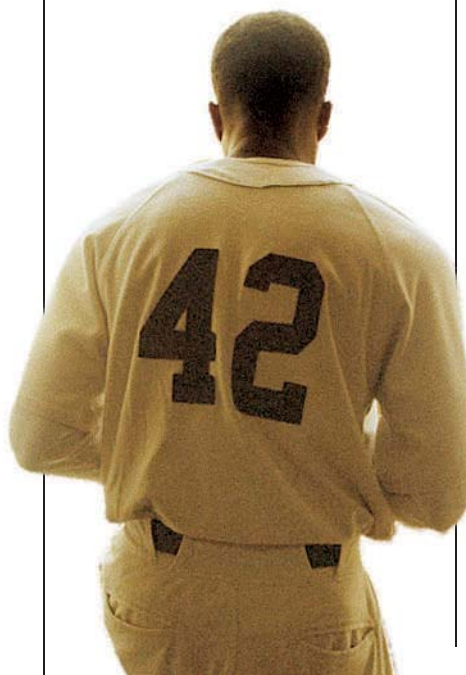

The extras eventually did boo. And shout. And yell racist taunts.

What "42," opening Friday, does best is show modern audiences just how bad Robinson had it when he broke baseball's color barrier in 1947, the year he

A Raptor Phobia

“Jurassic Park 3D” opened last week, 20 years after the flat version stomped into theaters. I will not be seeing it. Though 2-D-to-3-D conversion has gotten immeasurably better, it still tends to give me a headache. Also, a raptor might eat me.

I was 16 when I saw “Jurassic Park,” and my sister was 13. We saw it separately because eww who wants to hang out with their little sister, but we were forever bonded in the fear that a raptor might eat us. Our family lived in the deeply wooded wilds of Northern Virginia, and one of our chores was to take the recycling to the end of the relatively long driveway. After we saw “Jurassic Park,” the driveway got even longer and more raptor-filled, greatly increasing the chances that a raptor might eat us.

Even now that we’re voting, taxpaying, child-raising adults, it’s pretty easy for us to freak each other out. All I have to do is casually mention that her charmingly secluded house looks like a great place for raptors to hang out and suddenly her moving to New England seems like a pretty poor choice. Because now a raptor might eat her.

“Jurassic Park,” you might say, is a film that stayed with me. I remember the all-out wonder I felt at that first glimpse of the (non-raptor) dinosaurs, accompanied by John Williams’ John Williams-y score. The movie was fun and funny and technologically mind-blowing.

But I won’t go see it again. You should, though. Just don’t go at night. That’s when the raptors come out.

If you want to laugh so loudly that you’ll alert any nearby raptors to your presence, go to YouTube and search for “Jurassic Park melodica cover.”
You’re welcome.

A Divine Mystery

In 'To the Wonder,' breathtaking images say more than words

Film Review

"Wonder" has always been the word with Terrence Malick. More than any of his other films, "To the Wonder," his latest, beautifully shot work, distills his distinctive approach. There's hardly any dialogue at all, just the story of a Ukrainian single mother, Marina (Olga Kurylenko), and her up-and-down romance with Neil (Ben Affleck).

He's an environmental scientist who brings Marina and her 10-year-old daughter from vibrant, sun-drenched Paris to his home in suburban Oklahoma. The particular events and ruptures in Neil and Marina's relationship aren't closely followed, only the familiar tidal swells of love and loneliness.

During a separation, a local former flame (Rachel McAdams) also drifts in, forming an evanescent triangle. What this is, then, is a straightforward, abstractly rendered rumination on love, mostly from Marina's perspective.

"What is this love that loves us?" she wonders. The state of bliss she finds with Neil is inevitably, mysteriously fleeting.

Malick places these questions in a spiritual context. Javier Bardem plays a tangentially-related priest who wanders heavily among the unfortunate. The lead performances don't quite pull it off, but if the film is a failure, it's the best kind.

"To the Wonder" strives to communicate something universal about our inner nature. Cinema is a cathedral for Malick, and in it, light is heavenly. JAKE COYLE (AP)

Deep-Dive Into 'The Shining'

Film Review

"Room 237" — Rodney Ascher's documentary about the 1980 Stanley Kubrick horror film "The Shining" and five obsessive viewers with elaborate ideas about its hidden meanings — belongs to a post-modern wave of film consumption.

The testifiers of "Room 237" are nothing if not tireless in convincing us that they hold the golden ticket to Kubrick's deepest motivations.

History professor Geoffrey Cocks notices the typewriter Jack Nicholson's character uses to not write his

It works because Ascher made the brilliant decision to stage "Room 237" not as a talking-heads documentary but as a montage of snippets from Kubrick's own films.

"Room 237" becomes a hypnotic homage to a cinematic master whose absence is all the more palpable for his fans' attempts to revive them: resurrection by interpretation.

Intrigue Around The Edges

Film Review

"The Company You Keep" is a good, solid thriller about a fugitive trying to clear his name. But it's a much more interesting movie at the edges.

After being implicated in a bank robbery that turned violent, Jim Grant (Robert Redford, who also directed) has been living under an assumed name and working as a respectable lawyer when a former colleague and fellow fugitive from his radical days (Susan Sarandon) gets arrested by the FBI. Her apprehension piques the interest of a young newspaper reporter named Ben Shepard (Shia LaBeouf), whose dogged snooping also flushes out Jim.

A chase — part police manhunt, part shoe-leather reporting — forms the spine of the story. But there's a far more intriguing film in the shadows of the story.

"The Company You Keep" looks at the notion of morality from more than one angle, and without obvious judgment. It has a story to tell, not an ax to grind. MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN

"I love ramps — it's kind of a shame they've become so painfully chic. I could eat them until I have heartburn."

The passion for sharing fresh cuisine that Alex Guarnaschelli serves up on the Food Network is at the heart of her new cookbook, "Old-School Comfort Food."

FACE TIME

Alex Guarnaschelli

One of only a few women to have earned the title Iron Chef, Alex Guarnaschelli — a Food Network host, judge and competitor — has released her first cookbook, "Old-School Comfort Food: The Way I Learned to Cook" ($30, Clarkson Potter). We talked to the executive chef of New York's Butter and The Darby restaurants in advance of her Wednesday stop at Wegmans in Gambrills, Md. (6-8 p.m.; free; 1413 South Main Chapel Way; 443-332-6200).

Why was now the time to finally do a cookbook?

I don't think I knew what I wanted to say. I didn't know the recipes I wanted to share, so I let the material marinate. The result is something I'm very comfortable with.

Why a comfort-food book?

I had not thought to enjoy home cooking because it's what I do. You go to the office, and you might come home and cook to relax. What do I do to relax? Not cooking.

But I have a daughter, and I like to cook for her. I like to have that be a part of my parenting experience. I had to dig deep and figure out how I was going to negotiate my relationship with cooking, and it's through these recipes that I do. You should only cook what's really in your heart.

It's spring, which means lots of fresh things at the grocery store or market. What should people try that they may not be eating?

Some people collect shoes. I collect fava beans. I love parsnips. I love ramps — it's kind of a shame they've become so painfully chic. I could eat them until I have heartburn. I love corn. It sounds dumb, but it never gets old.

I would never have people buy something they don't love. But rutabaga and kohlrabi — it's upsetting to me that they're not as popular as corn or strawberries.

You named your restaurant Butter. What's your favorite way to eat it?

My answer's maybe pedestrian, at best: On a piece of the best loaf of bread with a pinch of salt. If I'm going to invest in something, it's going to immediately reward me in flavor payback.

You've said you hate the label "celebrity chef." What do you get from being on TV — from competing on "Iron Chef" to judging on "Chopped"?

I don't think about it as being on television. When I started cooking, there was no food television like there is now. Now you can start with the intention of being on television.

"Chopped" is much more of a teaching experience, and I'd argue the judges take a secondary role. But I do enjoy competing. It's like an endless Rubik's Cube.

So that's why you competed in various "Iron Chef" contests until you won on "Iron Chef Redemption" in 2012?

Some people want to win an Oscar, some want to be Miss America. I aspired to be an Iron Chef, and I felt like my story wasn't finished in trying to become one. I would have kept competing again and again.

Hey, Nice Rack

DOWNTOWN WORKERS on a budget no longer need to wear naught but ill-fitting pleated Dockers or dull dresses from the Ann Taylor sale section. Now they can score chic on the cheap at Nordstrom Rack. The discount little sister of the inimitable retail chain opens a new 75,000-square-foot store at 8 a.m. Tuesday at 1800 L St. NW. Expect 50 to 60 percent off designer clothing, shoes and a few housewares.

Slick Customer

BITE BEAUTY'S lipstick is natural enough to eat, though we'd recommend smearing the food-grade ingredients on your pucker instead ($24, Sephora.com). The small-batch, gluten-, paraben- and sulfate-free formula glides on nicely for a matte finish that lasts up to two hours. It's also loaded with shea and red-wine extracts that supposedly fight signs of aging.

A Bite of Spring

NO, THE NATIONAL CHERRY BLOSSOM does not taste like roasted tourists marinated in pollen! DC Patisserie's limited-edition boxes of macarons ($14 for six, Dcpatisserie.com) pay tribute to the Time of Pink Flowers and Annoying Crowds with far nicer, Asian-influenced flavors: Green Tea, Rose Lychee and, our favorite, rich-yet-zesty Chocolate Yuzu.

Wear on The Wall

IS A CIRCA-1990

Nirvana shirt/circa-now Biebs "Believe" jersey art? Maybe, if you preserve it in Umbra's new T-shirt frame ($40, Umbra.com/ustore). The plexiglass-metal contraption, sold in black or white, boasts an easy-off back, in case your tastes run more toward Swedish death-metal next year.

Maid in Spain

CHICAS IN BARCELONA and Madrid know a thing or dos about dressing well. That's due in part to the sleek-yet-femme styles of Spanish womenswear line Hoss Intropia, just in stock at Proper Topper (1350 Connecticut Ave. NW; 202-842-3055, ProPERTOPPER.com). Pieces that meld Great Gatsby hues (peaches, corals, mints) and modern shapes include a flapper-girl dress (shown, $240), a butterfly-print tunic ($220) and a yellow swing coat ($440) that summons Penelope Cruz and Audrey Hepburn.

DEAR MANOLO

ANSWERS FROM THE SHOE BLOGGER

At the end of this month, after years of hard work and a mountain of student loans, I am graduating from pharmacy school. My long-suffering husband has promised me a big party immediately after the ceremony. I'm on the shortish side, so what I'm looking for is a pair of heeled sandals that will be suitable for both crossing the stage and then boogieing down afterward in the backyard with my family and friends. —MELISSA

Manolo says, it is that time of the year when the flowers are blooming, the bees are buzzing, and the students are being flung from their comfy academic nests headfirst out into the adult world of work and bills and responsibilities.

For the mature student, who perhaps is already married and is in the professional graduate program, this transition is not so much shocking as it is welcome.

Gone are the all-night study sessions and the tuition bills, to be replaced by the late-night work meetings and the student-loan bills.

But the crucial thing is that, now, you are getting paid for the working like the indentured servant, as opposed to paying for the privilege of doing so.

Here is the Bander from the Stuart Weitzman ($398, Zappos.com), the snake-embossed, high-heeled sandal that is perfect for the springtime celebration.

Ask the Manolo a question at manolo@shoeblogs.com. Visit the Manolo at shoeblogs.com.

1 Cultural Appreciation
The cherry blossoms are finally here! So it feels OK to participate in festivities now. This weekend: The Sakura Matsuri, the Japanese Street Festival that takes up one mile of downtown D.C. Food, martial arts and J-pop performances are the perfect pairing for the flowers. 12th Street & Pennsylvania Avenue NW; Sat., 10:30 a.m., $5 (free if under 13); Nationalcherryblossomfestival.org. (Federal Triangle)

2 And Killer Bunnies!
If you're not a Monty Python purist, it's hard to resist "Spamalot," a show that softens the weirdest edges of the British comedy group's classic routines and turns them into a Broadway musical that's got a more conventional tone (and more rhymes). National Theatre, 1321 Pennsylvania Ave. NW; through April 14, $50-$125; 202-628-6161, Nationaltheatre.org. (Metro Center)

3 French Free-for-All
The Smithsonian finishes up its Francophonie Festival as it usually does: with an enormous dance party. Singer Kaissa, who was born in Cameroon and raised in France, will provide music. Guests also can watch a show of African fashions. National Museum of African Art, 950 Independence Ave. SW; Fri., 8 p.m., $35-$125; 202-633-3030, Smithsonianassociates.org. (Smithsonian)

Vitruvian Superman

'Da Vinci's Demons' draws outside the margins of history

Drama

FRI 10:00 It had to happen. They've turned Leonardo da Vinci into an action hero. David S. Goyer, executive producer of the new Starz series "Da Vinci's Demons," calls his creation, or re-imagination, "one-third Indiana Jones, one-third Sherlock Holmes and one-third Tony Stark." You might as well throw Jack Bauer and MacGyver into the mix, too.

The production values of "Demons" lean toward Showtime's "The Borgias" (returning Sunday at 10 p.m.). And no series with the artist/inventor would be complete without a little of popular author Dan Brown's mumbo jumbo of theological conspiracies and centuries-old secrets. In fact, the first few lines of dialogue of "Demons" include the phrase "angels and demons" — in case you didn't get the connection.

This is not to say that "Demons" isn't swashbuckling fun in its own ridiculous way. In the first hour, our hero (Tom Riley) meets up with a Turkish mystic, wins and loses a few sword fights and bar fights, devises a flying machine, schemes to build a robotic bird, markets himself as a military engineer and uses his etchings to court the comely mistress of a powerful noble. He does this with the bravado of a 21st-century comic-book hero.

The dialogue on "Demons" resembles a tongue-in-cheek PBS costume drama. Speaking of, look for Hugh Bonneville, of "Downton Abbey," in the series' opening frames. He's not around for long, but you see a lot more of him in those brief moments than you've ever seen of Lord Grantham.

SAT 8:00

Bet on Your Baby (ABC) This new series, hosted by comic actress and working mom Melissa Peterman, features five families competing to see how well they can predict their toddlers' next moves in the hope of earning cash toward the kiddies' college funds.

SUN 9:00

Nurse Jackie (SHO) Season 4 ended in chaos and devastation for Jackie (Emmy winner Edie Falco, right) and Dr. Cruz, as Charlie lost his life to drugs. Season 5 will address whether Jackie will be able to continue her sobriety.

SUN 9:00

Anthony Bourdain: Parts Unknown (CNN) The host of "No Reservations" is back on the road in his new series. First up: a trip to Myanmar. CNN is a little less bland just for his presence.

SUN 10:00

Veep (HBO) This season finds U.S. Vice President Selina Meyer (Julia Louis-Dreyfus, left) back for another term of screwball politics and firestorms as she tries to parlay slightly above-average popularity polls into increased influence with the president. But even her most banal decisions can have far-reaching consequences. (TRIBUNE MEDIA)

The Lovable Grump

Louis C.K. sets the tone in the opening seconds of his consistently funny, if downbeat, new special "Oh My God" (Sat., 10 p.m., HBO). He compliments the fans on the handsomeness of the venue he's performing at, then qualifies that by saying that it's the only interesting building "for miles around." That, in a nutshell, is the essence of this deeply neurotic and introspective grump. (UU)

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You don't want to be entangled in something that is not of your making today. Do what you can to avoid anything "dicey."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You are being slowed by something you cannot identify — but take care that you don't try to fight against what you do not understand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be searching for something that is out of reach at this time — but that doesn't mean you can't locate it by day's end.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can get along with almost anyone today, but you can't always be alone with just anyone! Choose close friends carefully.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The advice you offer a friend or loved one may not be understood at first; don't make things worse by becoming defensive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are ready for almost anything at this time — but what comes your way today may exceed even your wildest imaginings. Hold on tight!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your willingness to help out a friend in need will be appreciated, and you may not have to turn your day upside-down in order to come through.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) There is much potential in a certain situation that others do not seem to recognize — but you know a good thing when you see it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be caught between what you know to be right and what others are insisting is right for you. Mistakes can be made!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll receive an offer from a friend today that makes you wonder if you're on the right track. He or she makes other options sound good!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'll receive advice today from an unusual source — and if you take it, you're likely to be tied in an unusual way to him or her.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You'll be thinking about money matters throughout much of the day. Preparations you made in the past should smooth the way for you today.

DIFFICULT

Fill in each column, row and 3x3 box with the digits 1 through 9 without repeating any. The twist in Samurai Sudoku is that the digits that appear in the overlapping boxes must work for both puzzles. A piece of advice to get you started: Don't focus on completing one grid at a time. Keep the whole puzzle in mind as you go, because filling in a number in one grid could give you clues to another.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Union volunteers steal a Confederate locomotive near Marietta, Ga., and head toward Chattanooga, Tenn., on a mission to sabotage as much of the rail line as they can; the raiders were later caught.

1955

The Salk vaccine against polio, created by Dr. Jonas Salk and his colleagues, is declared "safe, effective and potent." Within two years, U.S. polio cases drop by 85 to 90 percent.

1963

Civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. is arrested and jailed in Birmingham, Ala., charged with contempt of court and parading without a permit. He is released on bond April 20.

Not Quite as Egregious
As 'Rosebud Is the Steed'

Kevin Bacon apologized via Twitter on Tuesday for retweeting a spoiler about "The Following," in which he stars. "To all the fans abroad and late watchers I'm truly sorry ... I just wasn't thinking. Won't happen again," he wrote. He also posted a Vine video in which he repeats "my bad" three times. The offending tweet read "Nice twist." (EXPRESS)

TROUBLED

A Makeover Is SO the Least of Their Worries

Amanda Bynes' parents are unhappy with Kim Kardashian's comments (she said she was obsessed with Bynes' makeover) on "Chelsea Lately," Radaronline.com reported. "They thought the remarks Kim made were in poor taste," a source told Radar. "Her makeover is just one example of her troubling behavior." (EXPRESS)

'Victims'

An 'Untouchables'
Re-Enactment
Does Sound Fun

Ryan Seacrest was a victim of an alleged swatting yesterday, TMZ.com reported. Police responded to a caller who said armed men were shooting their way into Seacrest's home. A source told TMZ that the caller specified "mobster-looking guys in suits with rifles." (EXPRESS)

TOTAL CONFUSION

Kim Nods, Smiles

Noted feminist Gloria Steinem says media outlets and haters generally should shut up about Kim Kardashian's weight gain. "Our bodies are never public property under any circumstance," Steinem told Usmagazine.com. "If our bodies are treated as ornaments instead of instruments, that's because we are rebelling because it's an effort to distract us," she said. "So don't be distracted. Why bother getting caught up in that?" (EXPRESS)

Rob laughed. Kristen was so happy and expressive today! Look at that grin!

DO WE KNOW THOSE PEOPLE?

Robsten Avoid Eye Contact With Vaguely Familiar Men

Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart ended up sharing a Hollywood bar with a record release party for the band Hanson on Stewart's birthday, E! News reported. It is unclear whether the couple knew any of the members of Hanson or even that they were all sharing a space. (EXPRESS)
